Mr J. Herbert Tritton, the President of th Institute of Bankers, in his recent inaugural address at the opening of the eighth session of the Institute, said the silver question had, from being a comparatively unimportant under-current, assumed proportions which now overshadowed all other economic questions, and the Bland Act was no doubt one of the chief disturbing influences in the vear, Bro. W. H. Gaskell Treasurer, and Bro. matter, in which the only bright spot was that India herself was receiving a great impetus in her foreign trade. The Bland Act, however, passed in the interests of the owners of the silver mines, was, in the speaker's opiuion, doomed; and we might take consolation from the probability of railway extension in India and China and consequent absorption of silver. He warned his heavers to listen to no currency nostrums. We have no desire to anter on a discussion of "currency nostrums," but we may point out that many authorities do not agree with Mr. TEITTON in his anticipations as to the Bland Act, while, if the statements of Mr. Del Mar, during the year 1884. As the smaller silver coins, had been reduced to "tokens"—that station by one of the Batteries 1st Brigade landslip, the ground being cracked and broken is, limited in legal tender-twenty years before, and as no larger ones than the dollar ed transport Venetia. The 8th Battery S. D. were ever authorized to be coined, the omission of the eilver dollar from the law worked the entire subversion of the measure of Battery stationed at Colombo. The men value, which thereafter became limited to gold coins and paper notes. Subsequently a clause was slipped into the law, equally legal tender of silver dollars to the sum of Serve in Hongkong, during the mouth ended the company's terms. The Commission reported in favour of restoring the law to its position previous to the alteration. This recommendation was adopted by the House of Representatives. When the measure came before the Senate it met with unexpected opposition, chiefly from Mr. Sherman. a former Secretary of the Treasury. The result of this opposition was the adoption by Congress, on 28th February, 1878, of a compro- against vessels arriving from the following that the fairway channel into Chinhai is in anymise measure known as the Bland Act. This Act did not admit silver to free coinage into dollars, as before, but provided that the the Province of Hizen in the Saga Prefecture, her side and bottom a few dozen sheets of copper, Treasury should purch see not less than two nor more than four millions dollars worth spection Regulations referred to above will be the steamer, on the afternoon of the 21st ultime, of silver bullion per month and coin it into enforced at all the Ports in the above localities | was leaving Chinhai for Wenchow. The persons who, according to Mr. DEL MAR. encompassed the demonstrisation of silver in 1873 are now seeking to repeal the Bland Act and threw upon the markets 19th inst. A full programme has been published, of the world the six thousand tone of silver and a perusal will show that on the whole it is which have been coined under it. The demonetization of silver was accomplished in new items. There will be a junior sculling Libris was thrown in the fairway obtained. From the interest of gold, and the gold_interest being predominant in England it is not perhaps surprising that the President of the Institute of Bankers should assume the position be does. But the silver question is one which England will have to face and solve in some way or other. A very large proportion of its foreign trade is carried on with in the relative values of the precious metals that trade. We may here quote the remarks of an writer in the World, who, in answer to the question "What is the races, should not have to compete with a fresh season 1885 is near its close. The steamers on ment steamers from the Central Station, and prices?" says :- "It is but simply the dis turbance of the currency legislation of the race is sgain the last event of each day, as was tricts fed through Chinking; some dealers was not required, however. the impetus received by the foreign trade of India from the depreciation of silver applies only to the export, not the import trade, the latter being immeasurably damaged. Thenatives, who are silver users, are naturally willing to sell their produce when they can get high silver prices for it, but they are not willing to pay more silver for shirtings and other articles of English manufacture the value of which is fixed by reference to an inflated gold standard. The same remark applies China, and has a direct bearing on the question of the introduction of railways. When it is decided to construct railways China wil America and pay for it in gold. To China, whose circulating medium is silver, this would mean enormous loss in exchange. few years ago the Chairman of the Hongyearly meetings of the shareholders, referring to the last silver loans negotiated for the Chinese Government, said that any future loans that the Chinese might wish to negotiate through that Bank would have to were raised the other day against the raising of a gold loan for the colony of Hongkong would apply with equal or greater force t
